When all Else Fails, Tie

Besides the Fighting EMU, who, dare we say, are showing signs for their typical end of the year meltdown with a pathetic 6-4 victory over the rookie Ch 4 News Team, the league is fairly evenly matched. With all but 3 teams within 1 simple victory of 2nd place, the race for playoff standings couldn't be tighter. Risky Bizness has stepped up their shit talk and it seems to be greatly improving their game, if you want to call 3-2 improved. If you listen to these new slingers of smack, their first 2 games (THE GAMES THEY SO MISERABLY LOST) mean nothing and have mysteriously falling off their radar. All this would be justified if they were not in a 3 way tie for the somewhat ok at a grade school activity award. So please, when you have defeated more notable teams and have a healthy 2 game lead or have perhaps clinched the so coveted (insert uncontrollable laughter here) 2nd place spot in the power rankings, then and only then can you run your mouth like a rabid hyena on crystal-meth.

So, I'm just gonna lay this out on the table to ask the simple question, what are we gonna do about this? WTF happen to the almighty Walrus? Do you think you could at least win a game for shits and giggles? It is absolutely no fun ripping you apart when you SUCK! Please for the sake of Ca Central whipping post, win a game would ya!

THEME WEEK: Red, White, and Blue. Feel free to express you patriotism this week. Please refrain from body paint unless you are female and smoking hot (No questions here, you know if you are), no one wants to see little red, white, and blue balled turkeys wobbling about on the field.

RECAPS: We have new douche bag pictures this week, YEAH! Remember, this newsletter comes to life with your help. Please be proactive and send us your recaps at cacentralnewsletter@gmail.com

FLIP CUP! Be sure to show up at the Auld Dubliner for after game festivities and competition. BTW, if you have some specifics about your Flip Cup ranking or recap of the flip cup action, please send it to us at cacentralnewsletter@gmail.com

FLIP CUP POWER RANKINGS

1	FIGHTING EMU Taking back the top spot in the flip-cup rankings. The highlight of the night was kicking tail in beer pong.
2	KILLER WALRUSES Representing team purple, good job. Perhaps the flipcup team should be the only players aloud on the kickball field.
3	BALL BUSTERS Award to BB for largest team bar turnout. Keep up the high attendance and the top seed could be yours one week, by default most likely.
4	ALCOBALLICS Great effort to solidify your spot as the drunkest kickball team. If you spew, spew into this.
5	RISKY BIZNESS Well, what can you say about RB? Well, nothing really comes to mind.
6	LOOKING TO SCORE A few ladies from LTS try to hold down the fort without their saucy captain anywhere in sight. Hats off to ya.
7	SMACK THAT Paging Dr. Douchebag, Dr. Douchebag you are wanted in surgery.
8	THE CH. 4 NEWS TEAM Why bother, I don't think they know about the bar.

KICKBALL POWER RANKINGS

1	FIGHTING EMU Since the EMU have absolutely NO competition on the field, they've turned their attention to the refs. Look out refs, the EMU will punch your face if you make bad calls.
2	LOOKING TO SCORE After weeks of smack-talk, LTS were finally shut up by the much improving Risky Bizness. We'll see how they handle the Ch. 4 News Team this week....
3	ALCOBALLICS Looks like the Alcoballics are getting back on track...and when I say getting back on track, I mean they're definitely drinking more on the field.
4	RISKY BIZNESS Well, the Biz finally caught their stride, with 3 wins in a row. They've got themselves a winning formula. Score runs, yell at the refs till they overturn calls, win the game.
5	KILLER WALRUSES The Killer Walruses now have a soundtrack for this season: The Downward Spiral. Ouch.
6	BALL BUSTERS Week after week the Ball Busters fall victim to bad refs. However, this week they came out on top of the pile of..... well, you can fill it the blank. Hint: It smells really bad.
7	THE CHANNEL 4 NEWS TEAM* Clearly, this team rattled the first place Fighting EMU this past week, causing a near meltdown, but unfortunately for the news squad, it wasn't enough to beat the EMU. Wouldn't it be great if they trounced LTS this week?!
8	SMACK THAT* Smack That found out the hard way that a drunk Alcoballics team is actually way better than a sober Alcoballics team. Doesn't get any better for ST this week vs the Ball Busters

* Brand new team.

Kickball 101

Greetings boys and girls, Professor Kickball, PhD here – your guru for the ins, outs, and what-have-yous about kickball: The rules and strategy. Face it folks, this is not NAM, there are rules. Rules we must follow. There is also strategy. Yes, some of us kickball die hards actually have strategies. Each week we will discuss a topic to help improve your knowledge of our beloved sport. So, heads up and stay alert for Kickball 101.

KICKBALL 101 – The Catcher (Are you the catcher or the pitcher?)

What would the world be without catchers?

Other than pitcher, the catcher is the most important position on the field. (NOTE: I only praise the pitcher, because the Emu pitcher might hit me if I don't)

The catcher is the first line of defense. Before the pitch has even been thrown, the catcher can impregnate the batter with confusion. Whether it be dry humping the batter's leg, taunting their dead mother, or playing voodoo with their soul, the catcher has an endless arsenal of possibilities to get the batter out before the pitch has ever been rolled. The catcher not only has to be quick witted, but also display an ample amount of athleticism as the position proves to require it.

In theory, the catcher should be the perfect blend of mind and body (actually this is what I look for on dates: a "catcher" with a perfect mind and body). The roots of kickball defense lie within the hands of the catcher. If their hands are shaky, the entire defensive structure will crumble. They have to be able to remain balanced in the most stressful of situations. The catcher will, in most cases, do the most running, throwing, and catching on the field during a fun-filled five inning WAKA sanctioned game of kickball. Someone on each team has to sacrifice themselves and be willing to carry the weight of the team on their shoulders all the way to oblivion (err... Vegas). Who is gonna step up?

Whoa, sounds like a heavy load...why such a burden? Cause well, everyone could bunt (or accidently bunt when trying to kick the ball farther than humanly possible). A sound catcher turns any mistakes, miscues, and what have you into quick outs, which means less of a possibility of runs...which translates to a higher likelihood of winning...which means choosing your catcher should be done with loving precision. Don't fuck up.

Next week I'm going to tie down one of those FUCK personalities and tickle their genitalia with a feather until they offer up their secrets of kickball past. Let's see what rises up when the excitement builds next week.

- Professor Kickball, PhD

GAME RECAPS

Seriously, are you that busy you can't spend a few minutes in-between flossing your cat and clipping your toe nails to give us a quick rehash of your game? For your lack of effort, the 7th Inning Stretch hereby proclaims your team as Douchebags of the Week!

This Weeks Douchebag of the Week Smack That

BALL BUSTERS VS. KILLER WALRUSES

Submitted by Ball Busters

Ball Busters win a close one. They look forward to this week's game riding a one game winning streak.

Submitted by Killer Walruses

Win or lose, at least the Walruses stay classy. We don't need to bitch and complain until the refs overturn calls. (which doesn't say too much about the refs either) We'll just leave it at that.

FIGHTING EMU VS. CH 4 NEWS TEAM

Submitted by Fighting EMU

Newsflash: The Fighting EMU survive the apocalypse.

Drastic words, yes, but that is one of two possible explanations for what occurred of the field this night (the other being alien abduction, but we will focus on the more plausible of the two). The apocalypse came disguised in many forms to test the will and commitment of the glorious and pure EMU. Without warning, the EMU captain and brother were tempted by the melodic harmony of Satan himself manifesting in the form of NIN. EMU relief pitcher, Konrath, was conveniently kidnapped by a swarm of bikini clad females (possibly could have been bikini clad she-males by initial visual perception) and tortured relentlessly for no apparent reason. The molten lava flows of hell began to ice over by the time the EMU co-captain trumped the Ch 4 News Team at the initial battle of Ro-Champ- Bo. As the EMU took the field to wage war against the rookie and innocent looking Ch 4 News Team (a team which definitely contains the Incubus and Succubus demons in human form), hell was all but the firey pits from which people flee in terror. Thus the persecution of the EMU began. Evil athletic demons filled the empty human shells dressed in black to join the Incubi and Succubi and played with talent the likes Ch. 4 has yet to realize on their own. The possessed beings quickly transformed from a group of bottom dwelling swamp leeches thirsting on the vulnerable meaty flesh of their victims to a highly trained Las Vegas freak show disguising their ungainly ability to suck at kickball. The Flying spirits wrecked havoc and attempted to render the EMU defense useless in the light of the darkness that had fallen over Harvard field. After a 3 run first inning, the demonic plague laxed their effort and the reeling EMU struck back. A 5 run bottom of the first sent shock waves through the lair of the evil one and Beelz himself manifested into the body of the unsuspecting and defenseless referee. Beelz focused all attention on the sturdy EMU co-captain, taunting him with call after call of blatant blindness. Then it happened, the event that we will not talk about after this recap is finished, the event that shocked the world: EMU pitcher BIG-D blacked out. In talking with the big guy, he doesn't remember a thing. Anyways, moving on to better things (although the now rare sighting of the once infamous Angry Bear appeased some of the onlookers), the EMU found some holy water and sent the evil dominance that embodied the scope of the Ch 4 News Team talent back to the depths of fire and ash allowing the forces of good to claim a bittersweet victory.

by Tits McGee, Kickball Correspondent

IRVINE - It was quite a dramatic game between this season's intellectually superior newcomer, Channel Four News Team and the undefeated Fighting Emu. Because of their ridiculous arrogance, the Emu let their guard down and Channel Four News Team proved to be a worthy opponent, despite losing 4-6.

"Fighting" Emu seems to be an appropriate name for this team - they argued every call and their Shrek-like pitcher used his massive gerth to intimidate an unfortunate ref from the Orange team.

Channel Four obtained an exclusive interview with a girl claiming to be the daughter of the Emu's pitcher.

"When my daddy yelled at the man, it made me very sad," said Hannah, age six.

Sad indeed, while the Emu lack a sense of sportsmanship, they can be applauded for being the only team to allow players with special needs. Despite being stricken with Down's syndrome, it didn't stop one special player from owning the title of "Ball Retriever." Regardless of his disability, his skills were put to good use while Channel Four News Team was up to bat. However, the Emu may want to consider equipping this player with a set of pads and a helmet in case he has another run-in with a chain-link fence.

ALCOBALLICS VS SMACK THAT

Submitted by Alcoballics

Akon said it best:

"Smack that all on the floor
Smack that give me some more
Smack that 'till you get sore
Smack that oh-oh!"

And "Smack that" we did.

Thanks to Amanda "the Jello Shot Queen" Camp and David "the Godfather of Jello" Sosa, we started the game juiced up and ready to rumble.

0 to 1 the first two innings had the Alcoballics slamming shot after shot... until it happened... We reached the pinnacle of liquored up perfection proven true by a massive kick to the outfield that started our scoring rampage.

RISKY BIZNESS VS LOOKING TO SCORE

Submitted by Risky Bizness

Forget the first two weeks, Risky Bizness is 3-0!!
"We're going streaking!"

You heard it right, the Biz is definitely back and showing off our veteran status and "secret recipe" JELLO shots with another dominate performance and 2-1 upset victory over Looking to Score. The Bizness is running like a well-oiled machine with dominate pitching, killer defense, and a kicker with a dagger for a foot.

In what could be called one of the best comebacks of our season, the third inning was explosive as the Bizness got two runners in scoring position followed by an explosive triple from Jason Cundiff driving them both home. That was all we needed as Jameson Lingi not only had a wicked pitching arm but also had one heck of a cannon that fired rockets to first base and prevented LTS from getting many runners on base.

Of course no game would be complete without someone moaning, complaining, and name calling. Let's just say, none of that came from our sideline this week. Can't say the same for LTS though.

Watch out Cal Central. The Bizness is running smooth and unaffected by the recession. Most of us assess risk for a living and if we were assessing week 6, we'd recommend installing a hydrant on the field because the Bizness is on fire!

Submitted by Looking To Score

Let's get this out of the way: LTS lost to Risky Bizness.

Once again Maria kicked serious ass with a crazy catch that was best viewed in slow-mo movie-style. With people gritting their teeth. With their hands clenched. With their brains thinking "Oh no, we can't catch it!"...but she raised her arms WAY up, and our girl caught it. Well played.

Much props goes to Justin who scored for us. Justin being the guy on our team who insists he doesn't get the newsletters, kickball emails, emails from our captain, or any other form of communication short of carrier pigeon. But we love him anyway and he made us proud.

What else to write...what else to write...it was Deb's birthday. Happy birthday girl! Phoenix can do some weird facial expression that apparently looks really scary when he's running straight at you. Andrew gives great hugs. Elizabeth had funky socks on. This is probably where the author can start writing her grocery list...but the rambling must stop eventually.

LTS is gonna keep it classy
